

Looking Up

A view of the world from Tim Rushby-Smith, a fully qualified paraplegic following a fall from a tree in 2005.

< < To buy the book, click on the cover image on the left < < Address to contact me: contact \(at\) timrushby-smith.com

The eyes have it...

By Tim Rushby-Smith on May 15, 2009 3:59 PM | Permalink | Comments \(0\) | TrackBacks \(0\)

Found this while trawling the intermeweb when I should have been doing something more constructive with my time. It's worth a nose around the site, though. Lots of intriguing eye-wobbling things to stare at, while dribbling on the keyboard.

Then there's the interesting contrast between the I.Q. sucking effect of staring at the illusions, and the very elaborate technical explanations...

Here's another. A bit creepy, somehow.

 Subscribe to this blog's feed

Tag Cloud

Arsenal art Back Up BBC
book disability
disability sport dreams
euphemism of the day
evolution Looking Up
media medication
pain radio The
Times wheelchair

Search

Search

Recent Assets

